New Super Mario Bros

By Hector P.

To start off, this is the last game review of the year. I have been playing this game for a long time. In my opinion, I think this game is good; there are no problems or anything like that. For those who don't know what it is, New Super Mario Bros is basically a sliding-scrolling platform video game that was developed by Nintendo EAD. My favorite thing to do in this game is to try to beat every single level. Therefore, I would say this game is the best game and it is pure nostalgia.

2021 - 2022 School Year Review

In all honesty, I didn't really have any high expectations set for myself this year. I thought that this year would be no different from middle school, and I came into it fully expecting to be disappointed. As my first proper year of high school is coming to a close, however, I can safely say that any of the expectations that I did set for myself have been completely blown out of the water. Not only has this year given me valuable life experiences that I'll remember decades into the future, but has also given me the motivation to improve myself even further as I continue through high school. This year was so great, in fact, that it almost makes me lament of the fact that my peers and I were never able to get the proper freshman high school experience, which would have undoubtedly been just as good. But how exactly was this year better for me compared to my previous years of schooling?

Well to start, this year has really made it clear that, moving forward, learning and taking material is going to be more important than ever. There were plenty of challenges and obstacles this year that weren't previously present in my other years of learning. I'd almost say that it was a stark contrast compared to the year of the pandemic, where the difficulty of learning and taking information was dulled due to the nature of being in the comfort of your own home, and being encouraged to procrastinate and or neglect information. The biggest examples of this, to me at least, is the presence of many of the sophomores first AP class (World History), the larger quantity of tests that were present through the school year, and a higher quantity of projects that required more attention and effort from the students. Though it was really difficult to keep up with these at times, this year really brought a refreshing and enjoyable challenge to me, and it makes me anticipate what's to come for the following years of high school and beyond.

Along with the presence of a higher form of challenge was also increased encouragement of student interactions and community building. In my previous years at Equipo, I felt as if students weren't able to connect to one another as easily as they would have liked, and that a majority of them only communicated with one another in small groups or only with close friends that they had made the years before. This was especially apparent in the year of the pandemic, as almost all communication among students had dissolved, a majority of them preferring the safety and comfort of a closed camera and muted microphone. Something that was introduced in that year that had managed to remain in this year at Equipo, however, were the extracurricular sessions, and I think that keeping them around was an excellent decision. These allowed students who shared similar interests to have more opportunities to talk among themselves, develop communication skills, and possibly even form new friendships as well. There are people in my own extracurricular that I wouldn't have had the chance of talking to if it weren't for the session, and I'm thankful for being given the opportunity to talk to and find a deeper appreciation for them.

Though there were many other great things that I have been able to get out of this year at Equipo, I think the most important that I, and hopefully other sophomore students have been able to obtain this year, is a greater sense of independence and responsibility. Prior to this year, I didn't really take my school life that seriously. I never considered the quality of my work, how my behavior was affecting others, how to manage my time and space out work, etc. As this year at Equipo progressed, however, It finally clicked to me that my presence at my school was more valuable than I once perceived it as. For example, learning about how the quality of your work drastically affects your chances to be accepted into colleges or future opportunities in life, such as obtaining financial aid, really drove me to value every thing that I did this year. I found myself taking my time on assignments more instead of rushing to get my work done on time, and I even found myself spending more of my free time to study for future assignments, or seek aid from my teachers past the hour tutoring sessions on Monday's. I really gained a deeper sense of responsibility from all of this, and moving forward, I'll be valuing how I spend my time and effort here at Equipo even more.

Needless to say, I really enjoyed my time at Equipo this year. I truly never expected to enjoy this year as much as I did, and it was definitely a pleasant surprise. I really hope that next year at Equipo is half as special to me as this year was. With the continued presence of these three factors, along with new additions that will likely enrich the lives of students at Equipo even further, however, I shouldn't have anything to worry about.

Sincerely,

Alvaro Carrillo
Equipo Academy Sophomore

THANK YOU EQUIPO

I hope next years even better!
